

Habitat One

The designers at Habitat One are quick to point out that “interior design isn’t rocket science”. The eight-man team however, have other qualities that they believe are integral to good interior design. This includes passion, professionalism and an innovative approach to converting ideas into stylish interiors. Habitat One is happy to take on any scale of project – whether it’s a simple room makeover or a major house overhaul – with equal amounts of fervour and enthusiasm.

PROJECT TYPE Condominium Showflat

FLOOR AREA 645 SQFT

This shoebox apartment showcases the designers’ flair for creating indulgent homes even in the smallest of spaces. By adjusting the scale of the furniture and applying a lighter coloured palette, the home feels larger without sacrificing its aesthetics.

RECENT HIGHLIGHTS

- Renovated and expanded showroom at West Coast Plaza.
- In the last couple of years, completed many residential homes, be it HDB, condo or landed, and commercial projects around Singapore.

THE EXPERTS WEIGH IN Finding The Right Fit

Renovating your home will take a long time; it’s a journey that will last two to three months! So it’s important that you’re comfortable with the designer that you choose. The chemistry needs to be there! Taste is subjective, and sometimes, what the designer likes is not something that you like. Either find a designer that shares the same tastes as you, or a designer that can understand and can accommodate to your liking.

Unavoidable Delays

A good interior designer should have a timeline that factors in possible delays, because there are some things that just can’t be helped. There’s not much we can do if a worker falls ill, or there’s a delay in the shipment of materials. We set strict deadlines, but we also factor in a week or two in case of unavoidable delays.

Proposing Design Ideas

When it comes to design, there’s no such thing as ‘one size fits all’. We like to come up with ideas and propose different design concepts for different clients. Some design firms don’t like it when a potential client comes into a meeting without any ideas or preferences, but we actually enjoy the challenge. We always welcome a new client to join us for a cup of coffee.

PROJECT TYPE Japanese Restaurant

FLOOR AREA 2,900 SQFT

This fusion-Japanese restaurant boasts a modern-Zen theme with a dark wood base and Japanese lattices for accents. The lights penetrate through the faux alabaster surfaces to create an inviting ambience.

PROJECT TYPE 3-Bedroom Condominium

FLOOR AREA 1,216 SQFT

By layering textures on top of one another, this apartment adopts a luxurious feel that enhances the simplicity of the design. The practicality of the home is emphasised as per the owner’s wishes.
